PRIVATAIR REINFORCES CHARTER SALES TEAM WITH THE ADDITION OF TWO SALES REPRESENTATIVES

International business aviation specialist PrivatAir announced today the addition of two charter sales representatives to its U.S. headquarters in Stratford, Connecticut. Steve Courtiss comes to PrivatAir with ten years of sales experience in a variety of industries, most recently in business aviation. Prior to joining the company, Courtiss worked in private jet membership sales at CharterAuction.com in Quincy, MA. Tracy Cassalia comes to PrivatAir with twelve years experience in the aviation industry. Cassalia's experience in the industry is far-reaching, including having held a position as Flight Coordinator for Premier Aviation and being a certified Flight Attendant.

After an overwhelming increase in the company's charter revenue in 2004, the expansion of the Charter Sales division in North America became necessary in order to ensure that clients' needs were met. Thomas Fitzsimmons, PrivatAir's COO for North America stated, "Our first quarter U.S. charter revenue is already up 62% from last year and we expect this trend to continue with the expansion of both our charter fleet and our sales team."

Mark Reichin, Senior VP of Charter Sales said. Both individuals have an impressive track record of successful aviation experience which should allow them to make a significant contribution to the future development of our activities. We are happy to welcome them at PrivatAir and are confident that their addition to the charter sales team will help us meet our clients' travel needs even better.
